visioning the future
If someone says:
“That’s impossible.”

You should understand it as:
“According to my very limited experience and narrow understanding of reality, that's very unlikely.”
Visioning helps:

» Blue Sky ideas
» Thought Leadership “points”
» Set future strategy
» Break away from legacy
» Sell ideas to internal audiences
“When” is the first step. There is a threshold of time that once passed two things change:

1) Current Technology no longer matters.
2) You need to factor in possible changes to market conditions.

“Intel's work builds on the progress MIT has made with transmitting power through resonant magnetic fields. But where the MIT team, led by Marin Soljacic, has only achieved 50% efficiency over a range of a few feet, Intel is said to have recently zapped up to 60 watts over the same distance at an efficiency of 75%, which is quite a leap forward.”

“The RFID tag is also very interesting. When you walk up to the car, the Model S detects your RFID keytag and pops out the handles for you. When you want to start up the car, there’s no start button. You just sit there and wait for the car to detect your RFID presence.”

In computing, the Internet of Things refers to a network of objects, such as household appliances. It is often a self-configuring wireless network. The concept of the internet of things is attributed to the original Auto-ID Center, founded in 1999 and based at the time in MIT[1].

The idea is as simple as its application is difficult. If all cans, books, shoes or parts of cars are equipped with minuscule identifying devices, daily life on our planet will undergo a transformation. Things like running out of stock or wasted products will no longer exist as we will know exactly what is being consumed on the other side of the globe. Theft will be a thing of the past as we will know where a product is at all times. The same applies to parcels lost in the post.

An Eco-Comparison Between E-mail & Google Wave

Why Google Wave is Greener than e-mail & how Google have solved their e-mail storage problem.

*This is a rough piece of math based on my company Lotus Notes Inbox for internal communication only.

E-mail

1 Project
8 Users

30 “copy all” e-mails x 8 users
= 240 copies of e-mail

Google Wave

1 Project
8 Users

30 wave updates x 8 users
= 1 Wave

by Ivan Pols www.retry.tv
Google Wave uses 0.426% of the hard drive storage space that e-mail does.

It seems Google Wave could be a major tool in lowering a company’s Carbon Footprint. With fewer hard drives for storage, you use less energy and create less landfill. Seems like a good reason to plan an upgrade.

The Three-Trillion-Dollar War: Its Cost in Ten Steps

In 2003, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld estimated that a war with Iraq would cost $60 billion. Five years later, the cost of Iraq war operations, is more than 10 times that figure. By the time the United States leaves Iraq, the estimated cost of war will be more than $1 trillion.

1. Operational Costs
   - Includes training, transportation, maintenance, and insurance of military equipment.

2. Additional Expenditures
   - Includes costs such as Amtrak subsidies, end-of-year bonuses for military personnel.

3. Inflation
   - Cost of delivery equipment, delivery of cargo, and support for combat forces.

4. Operational and Peacemaking Costs
   - Includes costs for the division of Iraq.

5. Health Care
   - Health care costs for troops wounded in battle.

6. Restoring the Military
   - Cost of training military personnel.

7. Social Security
   - Cost of 401K retirement funds.

8. Interest
   - Interest payments for multiple trillion-dollar mortgages.

9. Lost Economic Output
   - Loss of economic output due to war.

10. Macroeconomic Impact
    - Impact of war on the macroeconomic growth of the United States.

What’s in the Customer’s Mailstream?

Reporting by Paula Andrus, Illustration by Jule Buhman

Marketers are really good at understanding what makes a mail piece stand out, but it’s not always clear what that piece needs to stand out against. What does the rest of the consumer mailstream look like? As your target customers rifle through their daily mail, what other pieces are they likely to encounter as they consider, open and discard their way through their mail plan? To find out, we worked with the two biggest distributors to the U.S. mailstream — First-Class Mail® and Standard Mail® & Periodicals — to get a better idea of what American households are getting in their box. Here’s what we learned. (NOTE: All data is from 2007, the year for which the most recent figures for mail to U.S. households are available.)

Looking for a Wi-Fi hot spot? Try 10,000 feet up

"This is the year" for Wi-Fi on planes, said Jack Blumenstein, president and CEO of Aircell, whose Gogo® Inflight Internet service provides access on Delta Air Lines, American Airlines, AirTran and Virgin America flights, and will begin testing on United flights later this year. Gogo is installed on more than 200 commercial planes, and Blumenstein said he expected 1,200 aircraft to have Gogo capability by the end of 2009.

Hands out for the hotspot as taxis start offering Wi-Fi access for passengers

National Radio Cabs, one of Dublin's largest taxi firms, will shortly begin a trial of free Wi-Fi service in some of its fleet in which passengers will be able to connect to antennae via Wi-Fi using netbooks, laptops or hand-held devices.

This confusion is understandable given the lamentable names that have been assigned to different technologies. This isn't the first time this has happened.

JavaScript sounds like it has something to do with Java. It doesn't.

In fact, Java is to JavaScript as ham is to hamster.

And so to XHTML 2.

You'd be forgiven for thinking it has something to do with XHTML 1.0 or XHTML 1.1.

It doesn't.

How Twitter Will Change the Way We Live

By STEVEN JOHNSON  Friday, Jun. 05, 2009

The one thing you can say for certain about Twitter is that it makes a terrible first impression. You hear about this new service that lets you send 140-character updates to your "followers," and you think, Why does the world need this, exactly? It's not as if we were all sitting around four years ago scratching our heads and saying, "If only there were a technology that would allow me to send a message to my 50 friends, alerting them in real time about what I'm thinking right now."
THE NARCISSIST TEST

STEP 1: Take a moment to think about yourself.

STEP 2: If you made it to step 2, you are not a narcissist.

#iranelection is a popular topic on Twitter right now.

A large percentage of the Iranian population disputes the election of President Ahmadinejad, believing the election rigged. A "Sea of Green" took to the streets (and internet) to protest.

If the Twitter community was 100 people...

- 20 dead (empty accounts)
- 50 lazy, not tweeted in the last week
- 5 loud mouths, creating 75% of the tweets
- only 5 with more than 100 followers

“While it had 25,000 apps in January, that number has more than doubled: it now has over 65,000 applications. With another five months to go in 2009, we should see the app count break 100,000. Seriously, think about how large that number is.”

“...a new survey, commissioned by Best Buy, indicates that 6 in 10 Americans (60%) would choose to give up alcohol for a week if it meant they could hold onto their mobile phone – a shocking 15% would even opt to have their teeth drilled in exchange for keeping their mobile phones in their pockets.”

“The survey also highlights that many Americans (47%) haven’t yet made the switch to the smartphone way of life because they’re just too confused about models and features.”

“..a record-setting 14.4% indicated that a smartphone was on their list of planned mobile phone purchases in the next 90 days. More impressively, a whopping 44% of those smartphone buyers plan to plunk down their hard-earned cash for an iPhone, compared with just 23% planning to buy a BlackBerry smartphone in the next 90 days.”
